Headline:
Cloudy with patchy rain on Tuesday, but drier, brighter later.

Today:
Mostly cloudy with outbreaks of mainly light and patchy rain, but gradually dying out in the afternoon with brighter conditions developing and perhaps some sunny spells later in the day. Rather cool with winds turning into the northwest in afternoon. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Tonight:
Mainly dry and bright end to the day, then dry with clear spells overnight, but there could be the odd shower over northern Aberdeenshire. Light winds and a frost developing. Minimum temperature -5 deg C (23 deg F).

Wednesday:
Frosty start, then dry and sunny, but perhaps cloudier in far north with the odd light shower. Pleasant in sunshine with light winds but rather cool and chilly in shade. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
High pressure will bring mainly dry and bright weather with some sunshine. Mainly light winds, but rather cool with night frosts and the odd shower possible over northern Aberdeenshire.
